Ayurvedic Abyangam Massage

The Ayurvedic massage is called "Abyangam" in Ayurvedic medicine. The Ayurvedic massage is one of the most traditional techniques for body care. It is considered a unique art, the way that allows the unification of body, mind and spirit, capable of producing and recreate the real individual energy. For a better result of the massage, we will use vegetable oils and other medicated products of the indian traditional medicine. The use of these oils at topical level helps, integrated to other internal therapies, renew compromised states of health . The Ayurvedic massage is a total energetic treatment; its action is based mainly on the circulatory system with a draining action on tissues, but its aesthetic effect is also evident.

The benefits of traditional Ayurvedic massage can be summarized follows:

- It strengthens the body, since the increase of circulation of vital fluids and the elimination of toxins allow a better nutrition of tissues and fortify them.
- It improves sleep: the head and the foot massage quiets the mind.
- It strengthens the skin, maintaining its proper hydration and making it soft and radiant.
- It improves complexion: improving the skin tone, makes it stronger and healthy.
- It eliminates stress.
- It helps increase the immune system and accelerates the healing of wounds, as it helps hormonal and vital circulation.
- It removes fatigue, either caused by mental effort, muscle stress or accumulation of toxins.
- It helps restore harmony and balance the nervous system.

The use of appropriate oils and the expertise allow however to customize treatments and work on specific problems such as psychic stress, depression or physical distress: muscles, joints, digestive system problems, circulatory system and so on.
